

Greg Brower teaches the complete range of BRODY communication skills programs, specifically presentation and interpersonal skills.

An approachable, perceptive and flexible trainer and coach, Greg is often asked by our clients to design programs for specific audiences and specialized teams.

In the classroom, Greg connects with audiences of any size. With infectious enthusiasm, his style guarantees a highly participatory, positive learning environment. Clients can expect a training session whose reach will extend far beyond the classroom.

Greg draws upon his significant professional accomplishments to ensure real world applications to his training. As a member of the Maryland Bar Association, with an extensive background in litigation, mediation, sales and consulting, Greg facilitates constructive dialogue to create positive outcomes in a variety of challenging situations and circumstances. Greg has been very involved in the Maryland legal community, promoting the use of mediation in business.

Growing up in the New York area, Greg graduated with honors from Fordham University, and received a law degree from the University of Missouri. He now resides with his family in the Baltimore area. An avid book collector, Greg can be found throughout the country living part-time in used bookstores.
